TRAINMEN MAY STRIKE

Claim Railroads Not Living Up to Adamson Law

New York, Nov. 13.—Failure of the railroads of the country to live up to the spirit and intent of the Adamson eight-hour law will result in the strike vote of the four big railroad brotherhoods being put into effect, it was announced here today by William G. Lee, head of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen after a three-hour conference between brotherhood and railway representatives.

The conference was called to discuss and if possible reach some agreement or conclusion as to working out the provisions of the law which goes into effect Jan. 1. The strike vote referred to by Mr. Lee is that taken prior to the conferences between the railroad and brotherhood heads and President Wilson, which was followed by the passage of the Adamson law after the brotherhoods had threatened to put the vote into effect at that time.

CAPT. BEN WILSON ACTING MAJOR

Advices from El Paso, Texas, are that Capt. Ben W. Wilson, of Co. G, Kentucky National Guards, is acting major during the absence of Major Henry W. Rogers, who is on duty at the rifle range, about twenty miles from Fort Bliss. First Lieut. Lawson Miles is acting captain of Co. G.

The town knocker never troubles his head over the eight hour law.

HANNA-BACA

Popular Earlington Woman Weds National Guard Captain in New Mexico

One of the prettiest weddings of Columbus, N. M., was performed yesterday at high noon at the First New Mexico infantry camp, when Chaplain Father Z. T. Vincent joined in marriage Miss Antoinette Hanna, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Hanna, of Earlington, Ky., and Capt. James Baca, of the First New Mexico infantry.

Col. E. C. Abbott, gave the bride in marriage. Miss Amelia Hanna, sister to the bride, was her maid of honor, and the bridegroom was attended by Capt. T. J. Molinari. The ushers were: Captains E. A. Roberts, E. L. Safford, W. C. Watson, G. H. Patton, P. T. Keown and A. J. Brock.

The regimental band played the wedding marches and appropriate music for the occasion. Mrs. Baca made a lovely bride in a creation of white georgette, trimmed in chintilla lace. The sleeves were long and the bodice was made close fit and cut "V" at the neck. Attached to her shoulders hung a court train of pau velvet, worn "Juliette" fashion. She wore a veil of tulle, with bands of pearls across her forehead. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley, and looked a sweet and charming bride.

The maid of honor was gowned in pink georgette, with pearl trimmings, and carried pink Killarney roses.

Following the wedding ceremony an elaborate luncheon was served in the officers' mess. The table for the affair was decked with many chrysanthemums and ferns.

Captain and Mrs. Baca left later in the afternoon for El Paso, where they will pass their honeymoon. They are guests at the Hotel Paso del Norte.

The bride is the daughter of the late M. Hanna, Sr., and is one of the most prominent families in Kentucky, as well as being one of the attractive young ladies of her home town. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. J. Baca, a well known family of New Mexico. He is also the grandson of the late Santiago Baca, a pioneer family of Albuquerque, and one of the best known families there. His mother is now residing in Santa Fe, N. M.

Captain and Mrs. Baca will return to Columbus, N. M., after a short stay in the city.

Congratulations from the war department was received by Captain Baca yesterday.—El Paso (Texas) Morning Times, Nov. 5.

Negro Murderer Under Arrest

Ewen Selvia, colored, known here as Ewen Williams, was arrested at Madisonville Sunday afternoon after a lively chase and is confined in the county jail awaiting trial for murder. He was indicted for killing Geo. Lowe, colored, near No. 1 mine last summer.

Whether the election suited you or whether it didn't, you have the satisfaction of knowing that you are only one little toad in a big puddle.

Everybody wants the war to end and nobody knows how to end it.

PRESIDENT SMITH AGREES TO ARBITRATE

Consents to Lay Firemen's Grievances Before Committee of Three

President Milton H. Smith, of the L. & N. Railway Company early this morning signed a proposition submitted to him by Judge W. L. Chambers, of the Federal Board of Mediation and Conciliation, whereby the difference between the company and firemen, growing out of a dismissal of about twenty men at the Nashville terminal will be laid before an arbitration committee. This announcement was made by Judge Chambers at 1 o'clock this morning after Mr. Smith had given his approval to the plan for arbitration.

Under the terms of the arbitration the firemen are to appoint one disinterested person, the railroad will appoint another and Judge Chambers will name the third member of board which, it is provided, shall hold a conference in not more than ten days after the appointments are made.

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if Cross, Sick, Febrile, Constipated

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give our delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Suit to Test Constitutionality Adamson Law

Union Pacific has filed suit in Federal Court at Omaha to test the constitutionality of the Adamson eight-hour law. Bill of complaint alleges law is not a proper regulation of interstate commerce because it violates the guarantees of the fifth amendment of the Federal Constitution and because it is unworkable as applied to existing circumstances. A U. S. District Attorney and four Union Pacific employees are made defendants in the suit.

The Atchison, Rock Island, L. & N. and other roads have brought similar action. A joint case is to be heard at Chicago soon.

The woman who really knows how to manage her husband seldom tells others how she does it.

L. & N. R. R. BRINGS ACTION

Constitutionality of Adamson Law is Attacked in the Suit

SAYS EXPENSES WOULD BE MORE

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company at noon today filed suit in the United States District Court here questioning the constitutionality of the recently enacted "Adamson Eight-hour Law" for railroad employees.

Named as defendants in the action which is directed against the United States, are Perry B. Miller and Thomas D. Slatter, United States District Attorneys respectively for the Western and Eastern districts of Kentucky, and the following officers of railroad fraternities, all of whom are employed by the Louisville & Nashville railroad: Robert Clark, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; J. F. Osborne, of the Order of Railway Conductors; F. F. Netherton, representing the firemen, and J. B. Graham, representing the brakemen.

The action was decided upon at a meeting held yesterday, attended by counsel of the L. & N. in the different states traversed by the road, meeting at the call of Col. Henry L. Stone, chief counsel.

First Snow Fell Today

The first snow of the season in this section fell early this morning. It was a light fall, but there was a great deal of ice. The thermometer was below the freezing point all morning and there is a cold north wind.

If you feel like cussing us for what appears in these columns let 'er rip. We know then that you read the paper.

The fellows who lost in the election will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that the dear people will not be cussing them for their failure to make good on their promises.

Famous Expert Coming to County

Word has just been received by the Hopkins County Public Health and Welfare League that Miss Marion Williamson, state installing nurse for the State Tuberculosis Commission, has secured the services of Dr. McMullen, the famous government expert in trachoma, for the clinic to be held at Madisonville on Dec. 7th, 8th and 9th. On account of the possibility of securing Dr. McMullen's services the date for the clinic at Madisonville has been changed from Nov. 23rd and 24th to the above dates in December.

It is indeed fortunate that such able men can be secured for the trachoma clinic. Their services will be given without charge to patients treated. Let every one help the committee in this great work in eradicating trachoma, especially from our schools.

FOREST FIRE EXTINGUISHED

Body of Woman Had Escape From Being Consumed by Flames

The forest fire, which has been raging near Mannington for over a week, has been extinguished after a hard fight. The flame swept area extends almost to Nortonville and the loss will amount to hundreds of dollars, confined to fences and timber.

One day during the fire, while the body of a woman was awaiting burial, men had to throw water on the house for hours to prevent it from becoming ignited and consuming the corpse.

The fire originated from a pile of ties section men set on fire, the wind blowing sparks on dead leaves, and the fire quickly spread.

The Logan Case

The case of Commonwealth of Kentucky against Mack Logan, Buck Ferguson and Frank Tribble, is still being heard. The Commonwealth after examining seventy witnesses rested their side of the case at two o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Mack Logan then took the stand in his own defence. The taking of evidence will probably be completed sometime today. It is thought that the case will go to the jury late Wednesday or early Thursday morning.

The better farm home is not a panacea for all ills of dissatisfaction with farm life. There will be farm boys them to stay on the farm, but to make conditions good enough there that they may make an intelligent choice.

so much I did not

Printing Ballots

Mr. Salmon says that he knows The Messenger is doing this for the purpose of Republican favoritism. Well now, why should I, a Democrat, fighting for the right and opposing the wrong, especially fighting the Democrats that are in THE RING that will throw all their work to a few pets and spend the county money as they see fit, not as they would if they were paying it out of their own pocket. Mr. Salmon says that he would have given the Earlington ballots to me if I had asked for them: that is he says this on Friday morning after The Messenger had come out and on Thursday he told me emphatically that he gave it to the other fellow because he did not want me to get it; that he was sure that I was going to put The Messenger on a Republican basis.
What has Republicans or Democrats got to do with spending the county money? This money is as much mine as it is the other.—

An Ingenious Woman

A Story of the Days of Witchcraft.

By F. A. MITCHEL

There was once a young man named Conrad who married a girl named Joan. They were vassals on the estate of a baron who owned and ruled over a great territory. The man and the woman were both poor, and their neighbors wondered how they would get on. Nevertheless they prospered, and their prosperity was all on account of Joan, who was very shrewd. One thing puzzled those who knew her. She did everything in a way so queer that some of them thought her demented.
And yet her acts resulted to her benefit.

One person, and one person alone,
came to understand her—her husband.
Conrad was a stupid man, and it is likely this was the reason why he came to be an excellent auxiliary to his wife.
Having no ideas of his own, he was readily receptive of hers. For ten years she kept instilling her way of doing things into him, so that at last not only could she trust him to follow her lead, but at times to take the initiative on her methods.

There was much warfare in a small way in those days, attacks being made by one wizard upon another. In one of these incursions upon the domain of Baron Elginbrod, where Conrad and his wife lived, Count Hastings, the in-cursionist, took Conrad away with him, having learned that he and his wife had accumulated money, and held his prisoner for ransom.

Conrad was thrown into prison and told that he should stay there till he paid the ransom. He remained a captive some time, then sent word to his captor to say that if he would give him a messenger he would send him to his wife with an order to pay the ransom.
The count at once furnished the messenger, and Conrad wrote the following message to Joan:

My Dear Wife—I wish you to pay the ransom demanded by Count Hastings for my release. I will wait for you to do so for one week. One week from tonight if I am not liberated I will hang myself to the chimney of the room where I am confined. Your loving husband, CONRAD.

This letter was submitted to the count, who read it with satisfaction, "for," said he,
"if the woman is inclined to die, I dictate to the moment she shall pay, the threat of her husband to hang himself will influence her to pay my sum I ask." And he doubled the amount demanded for the ransom.

When the messenger delivered the note to Joan and she read her husband's threat to hang himself she fell over in a faint. The messenger did what he could to revive her and endeavored to reassure her by pointing out the impossibility of the prisoner hanging himself in the chimney, since, in the first place, he had no rope, and, in the second place, even if he had there was nothing in the chimney to which he could attach a rope.

This seemed to comfort Joan, and, gathering her strength, she wrote her husband a note stating that she would be unable to raise the money required for the ransom in so short a time, but she would do so as soon as possible.
She added a note begging him not to hang himself, thus depriving her and the children of his care and the pleasure of having him with them.

The messenger went back to the count with Joan's letter, and it was read with satisfaction, for it was evident that she was so terrified at her husband's threat, notwithstanding the fact that it would be impossible for him to carry it out, that she would do all in her power to raise the money for the ransom. So the message was delivered to Conrad, who read it, evidently pleased at the prospect of getting his liberty.

A week passed, and the night came on which Conrad had threatened to commit suicide unless his wife had by that time paid the ransom and set him free. His jailer, when he brought in the prisoner's supper and set it down on the table, said jokingly:

"Well, Conrad, are you going to hang yourself tonight?"

"Why should I? My wife has said that she might not be able to raise the money for my ransom so soon, but I am sure she will do so in time. I am aware that she must sell everything we have, including our home, to raise so large an amount, and I don't expect that she will be able to turn it all into ready money in less than another week, at least."

"Why, then, did you name a period insufficient for her to raise the ransom?"

"Because I did not wish her to lose any time."

"Well, I'm glad you have no reason to hang yourself. For if you did I should have to sit up and watch you tonight, and I prefer to be asleep in my bed."

So the jailer left his prisoner to eat his supper, and when he returned Conrad was snoring loudly on his cot.
The keeper went away satisfied that there was no danger of the prisoner cheating the count out of his ransom by killing himself, and he, too, betook himself to his bed and was soon snoring as loudly as Conrad.

When the next morning the jailer took Conrad's breakfast to him, expecting to see his prisoner sitting, as usual, at the table waiting for it, he was astonished not to see him at all.

Moreover, there was a strange stiffness in the room, the silence of absence of any living thing. The man, thinking that, after all, his prisoner might have carried out his threat, went to the chimney, fearing that he might see his body dangling there. There was nothing in the lower part, and, looking up, he saw only a small patch of blue sky.

With fear and trembling the jailer went to the count that his prisoner had vanished. In order to shield himself, he declared that he had heard strange sounds overhead during the night. He believed that his prisoner had carried out his threat to hang himself and that witches had carried off the body.

That was an age when people, instead of looking for natural causes, inferred everything to supernatural interference. The count so far leaned to the jailer's opinion that he did not look far for a means of the prisoner's escape. He examined the only outlet, the chimney, and satisfied himself that Conrad could not have climbed the flue. In those days chimneys were very large, and for one to work himself up a flue by his knees on one side and his back on the other was impossible. Conrad must have hung himself, and there was no accounting for the disappearance of the body except that the witches had carried it off.

The jailer's suggestion saved him from punishment, and the count was obliged to forego the ransom. He was beginning to recollect to his disappointment when one day a neighbor of Conrad's came across the border and reported the suicide living at home in comfort with his wife and children.

The count was astonished. Indeed, he would not believe the report until he had sent a spy into the enemy's country to learn the truth. When the spy returned and said that he had seen Conrad sitting before his door, the count was convinced that he was there.
But the spy, believing that witches had assisted Conrad to get away, supposed himself to be under the influence of his imagination. Conrad was sitting motionless at the time, and the spy got the idea into his head that he was a corpse.
He reported that he had watched the
time it made no motion.

The count, disgruntled at having lost his ransom and not satisfied with his spy's report, sent another, who saw Conrad chopping wood. This disposed of the theory that witches had carried back the corpse of a suicide, and the count determined to make a raid into the domain of Count Elginbrod with a view to again carrying off the wealthy Conrad.

Now, Conrad's home was near the border, and all the count had to do was to send a force across, kidnap Conrad and carry him away before any of the baron's forces could be brought to protect him. But it happened that Joan had been looking out of the window when the second spy saw her husband chopping wood and watched the man slipping away, as he supposed, unnoticed. Joan suspected what this meant and straightway took precautions. She sent one Oldershow, a neighbor, to Count Hastings' domain to win the confidence of the count and agree for a consideration to entice Conrad away from his home so that he could be readily captured. This man succeeded in his object. At the same time he was instructed by Joan to report that Joan was a witch.

This confirmed Count Hastings' belief in the jailer's suggestion that witches had been instrumental in Conrad's disappearance, but he attributed the removal to one witch, Conrad's wife. Nevertheless, he was so averse to being beaten even by a witch that he accepted Oldershow's offer and, having paid him a round sum, sent a dozen men with him to kidnap Conrad.

The expedition approached Conrad's house in the evening gloaming, and what was their horror to see the man they were after hanging by the neck to a tree near his house. They at once took to flight and never stopped running till they had reached their starting point, having left Oldershow behind them. They reported what they had seen to the count, and Oldershow, returning, entered Conrad's house and poured a heap of gold he had received for his work in Joan's lap.

This ended Count Hastings' efforts to regain possession of Conrad, for he was convinced of his being managed by a witch, that witch being Joan. But he sent a messenger to Baron Elginbrod to say that the baron had a witch in his dominions, and if he did not get rid of her she would infect the whole country.

Upon this the baron sent for Joan and asked her what truth there was in the count's charge.

"I leave, your worship," replied Joan,
"when Count Hastings raided your domain he carried off my husband and held him for ransom. When the prisoner wrote me that if I did not pay the ransom by a certain date he would hang himself in the chimney I knew that there was a chimney in the room where he was confined and that he meant that I should on a certain night send some one or go myself, get on the roof and let a rope down by which he could climb. I sent one Oldershow, who succeeded in doing that, and my husband escaped."

"Suspecting that the count would try again to make my husband his prisoner, I sent Oldershow to win his confidence and pilot a party to make the capture. I made a stuffed figure of my husband and hung it to a tree near the house. When they came to take him they were frightened and ran away.
Instead of the count getting a ransom,
I got the money he paid my messenger to lead his men into a trap."

The baron was so well pleased with Joan's story that he gave her a tract of land near his castle, where she and her family would be in less danger from Count Hastings' incursions.

A CHANGE OF MIND

By EARL REED SILVER

Dick Stevens, looking at the letter in his hand, frowned darkly.

"It's from my sister," he informed his roommate. "She's going to bring a girl home with her for the spring vacation."

"Well, what of it?" Jack Ackley stretched indolently on the cushioned window seat.

"What of it?" Dick threw the letter on the desk. "You don't know my sister, do you? Well, she's a highbrow in Vassar, and whenever she comes home she brings along some bespeckled old maid who talks about new thought or something else that I don't know anything about."

"Why don't you go home with me?" "I can't. We've never been separated on Easter, and dad is set on the idea of having us all together."

"Can't you come the day after Easter?"

"By George, so I can!" Dick looked up hopefully. "I'll go to New York to visit you next Monday."

"All right, I'll be looking for you," Jack glanced at his watch. "You'd better hustle if you're going to get that train."

"Well, so long," he said. "See you next week." His eyes fell upon the letter lying on the desk. "Oh, yes," he added, "my loving sister told me to keep a lookout for Miss Mary Hughes at Poughkeepsie. She's the girl who's coming to see us, and is expected to take the same train that I do. Sis went down yesterday."

Dick secured a Pullman seat at Albany, and gave his attention to a magazine until Poughkeepsie was reached. Then, however, he looked interestingly out of the window. Vassar girls, dressed in all their spring finery, were crowding on the train.

Two girls entered the car. One had blue eyes, the color of the sky on a perfect June day. The other wore spectacles and carried a book on "Modern Philosophy." The girl with the blue eyes sat opposite him, and the one with the spectacles took the vacant seat further down the car. The train started, but Dick Stevens did not turn again to his magazine. The girl across the aisle looked over at him and so he put the magazine away in his bag.

Then 15 minutes went before anything happened. Finally Dick took a chance.

"It's rather tiresome riding," he volunteered, wheeling in his chair.

"Yes, it is."

"Would you like something to read?" "No, thank you. It hurts my eyes to read on the train."

"Do you mind if I talk to you?" Dick's eyes looked frankly into her own, and the girl smiled faintly.

"Why, no, not at all," she answered frankly. "It will help to break the monotony of the trip."

"Thank you!" Dick smiled whimsically. "What shall we talk about?"

"Anything you say."

"Well, I'm going to tell you my name first. I'm Dick Stevens, and I live in Linden, N. J." She started slightly, but he failed to notice it. "I'm going home for a vacation in the dearest place on earth."

"Why," she said—and there was a decided twinkle in her eyes—"I've heard something about Linden. I've always thought it was quite a nice little place."

"It is, sometimes," Dick admitted, "but it won't be for me this vacation."

"Why?"

"Well, my sister's a senior at Vassar; maybe you know her—Betty Stevens." The girl looked interested.

"Every vacation she brings home some highbrow whom I have to entertain."

"That's too bad," she looked at him sympathetically. "Do you know who she's going to have this time?"

"Yes, a girl named Mary Hughes. You can tell by her name that she's an old maid." His eyes fell upon the bespeckled individual who sat at the other end of the car. "I shouldn't be at all surprised if it was that young lady over there. But I'll only have to be with her for two days."

"Why is that?"

"I'm going to New York the day after Easter to visit my roommate, Jack Ackley."

"Maybe," Dick hesitated for an instant, then plunged boldly ahead. "Maybe, if you're going to spend your vacation near New York you could let me come to see you."

"Maybe I could," she smiled. "But it wouldn't be quite proper, would it?"

"Why, surely!" Dick leaned forward. "You probably know my sister."

"Yes, I know her rather well. And I'm going to stay near New York, too."

"Do you mind telling me your name and address? I can get Betty to write you a letter introducing me."

"My name—" she hesitated a moment, her eyes bubbling over with fun—"my name is Mary Hughes and my address is the Easter vacation at Linden, N. J."

"What?" Dick almost fell out of his chair.

"Yes," she said. "I'm afraid I'm the highbrow your sister is going to wish on you. I'm sorry."

"Well!" Dick passed his hand thoughtfully through his curly, blond hair. "I'll write to my roommate tonight and tell him that I won't be able to visit him, after all. I'm going to try to spend the Easter vacation in Linden."

"BE PRETTY," HIS ADVICE TO WOMEN

Explains Common Sense Way to Get and Keep Beauty.

"BE NATURAL," HE SAYS

Holds Stomach is Source of Life. More Important Than the Heart. Warns Fair Sex to Take Care of It to Be Attractive.

"Many women paint and powder and use cold cream and lotions when their complexions begin to fade. They think a sallow, wan looking face can be made to bloom like a healthy one by such treatment. But this is all wrong.

"The skin must be treated from the inside out, not from the outside in. True beauty must come from a healthy body; it can not result from an unhealthy one. That is the secret of all beauty—it's beautiful because it's natural—that's all there is to it. Every woman with a good digestion has a good complexion."

This is the opinion of the Tanlac Man, who says all women ought to look pretty. He continued:

"Every woman has a right to be beautiful. It is her divine heritage and duty, and if she is lacking in beauty, is half sick all the time, is droopy, exhausted and not jolly as a girl all her life long it's her own fault. Sick and Don't Know It.

"The trouble with most women is that they are sick and don't know it. Scores of women, from girls to mature mothers, call on me daily, and not one out of a dozen really knows what is the matter with her. They have doctor for nervous prostration, for brain fag, for bad blood, for indigestion, gas, flatulency, on the stomach, headache, dizziness—and the chances are ten to one in every case that the whole trouble is in the digestive organs.
"Let nervous, pale, tired women tone up the system with Tanlac. Give it a chance and women should rapidly regain health, beauty and joy in life. I feel that Tanlac will do just this thing. Hundreds have told me what it has done for them."

Culinary Achievement.
May had never seen a pie without a top crust. One day she ran to her mother, greatly excited. "Oh, mother, cook just baked a pie without a roof."

Practice Right Living Now.
Many of us do not learn the secret of right living until it is too late to count for much—until a single day rightly lived is better than a lifetime of error.

After a hearty meal, take Doan's Regulents and assist your stomach, liver and bowels. Regulents are a mild laxative. 50c at all stores.

Naturally, He Limped.
"What is a 'lame duck,' anyhow?" asked the man from back home. "A lame duck," responded Congressman Hummelfut, "is a statesman who has been urged by his constituents to take his feet out of the trough."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

WHAT HAPPENED TO HIM.

"Ever been arrested for speeding?"
"No."
"Ever tried to climb a telegraph pole with your car?"
"No."
"Ever have a turn turtle on you?"
"No."
"Ever have to fix a tire all by yourself?"
"No, can't say that I have."
"Great Scott, man! I haven't anything happened to you that happens to all other motorists?"
"Oh yes. I've had a robe and three lamps stolen."

Complete Failure.
"I read a joke the other day about a man getting the last word with his wife by bawling it up the speaking tube as he went out the front door of the apartment."
"Tried it, eh? How did it work?"
"Didn't work. My wife must have read the same joke. She let a kettle of soapuds come down the tube just as I started to whistle up."

ONE OR THE OTHER.

First Office Boy—I hear you've quit your job.
Second Office Boy—Ya-aw; you see, I couldn't get along wit' de boss, an' he wouldn't resign, so I did!

The Prudent Brigand.
A brigand is a boastful bluff. Of bold, bad men he seems the worst. Until you start to treat him rough. And then he likes for safety first.

Handicapped.
"What's de reason," inquired Lottering Luko, "dat you can't go ahead an' git yourself reformed?"
"It's jes' hard luck," replied Flooding Peter. "I never could manage to git arrested in a way dat would give me no advantage of de right kind of a penitentiary."

Fixing the Blame.
"Miss Prudeleigh is awfully shy. Isn't she?" remarked young Muggs.
"Yes," rejoined the fair widow. "I wonder if she gets it from her mother?"
"No; from her father, I imagine," said Muggs. "I understand he used to be a great poker player."

Parental Conscience.
"My boy Josh has got me kind o' worried," said Farmer Cornsossel.
"Ain't he beavin'?" asked the neighbor.
"I hadn't thought about that. What I'm wonderin' is whether I kin spruce up an' be the kind of a father he thinks he's entitled to."

A Great Loss.
"So your car was stolen?"
"Yes."
"I would worry; perhaps it will be recovered."
"I'm not worrying about the car; that was insured. But I had six gallons of gasoline in the tank and I can't afford to stand that loss."

HOPELESS.

"Would you love me if I was poor, Evangelino?"
"Oh, yea."
"Den I'll break it gently to you. I've lost me nickel down a sewer!"

A Tribute to Her Skill.
A maid who has a winning way Is Arabella Ridge; 'Tis chiefly shown, her friends all say, When she is playing bridge.

Its Kind.
"My dog can scent an electrical disturbance when it is miles away."
"His nose must be something of a storm scentor."

The Right Kind.
"How could the hunters thread their way through that tangled jungle?"
"They had needle guns, I guess."

Preventive for Wrinkles.
